Implicit Bias in Selection Decisions
Educational Program

Did you know...we all have natural biases that affect the decisions we make.

Did you know...there is abundant research related to race, accent, perceived sexual orientation, weight, virtually every identity characteristic, even particular work experience or academic pedigree, that strongly suggests that implicit bias, positive or negative, exists in every decision-making process.

This educational program will prepare you to discover and overcome your personal biases. Doing so will prepare you to be a better decision maker in your efforts in recruitment, employment, tenure and other selection decisions. You will be better equipped to make the right decision.

Be part of the change! Create a more inclusive University. Join us for this one-hour program and uncover the tools for managing implicit bias.
